Sopwell Nunnery, the site of which is now represented by a picturesque pile of ruins, was situated on the high bank of the Vera a short distance south of St. Albans. It was built in 1140 by Geoffrey de Gorham, 10th Abbot of St. Albans, for sixteen Benedictine nuns. A famous inmate of the nunnery was Dame Juliana Berners, authoress of the well-known "Boke of St. Albans," a treatise on fishing, hunting, and hawking.

Dear Mother, I am sending this to tell you that I shall not be home till Friday morning (early) but to tea I shall have [illegible] has asked me to go to Thursday. Dr [illegible] Sunday. Love to all.
